

Get On Track

Dare to know, dare to believe in and dare to march to achieve that next years' words speak another voice. The dialogue is the means to raise awareness and to get on track.

Wake up! Speak up! We have to act to fix the world we live in.

Gas and dust, earth and a peaceful humanity was the sequence. We've gone the wrong way and have strayed towards the current situation of pollution, pandemic, drumroll, clatter of arms, fake news, racism, intolerance, conspiracy theories, cancel culture, destroying, avenging, threats, hate, fear and violence.

That is the track we ended up on.

But Europa is known for the territory where ideas are born and where there is an impressive heritage of artistic styles, literary, social and intellectual movements and ways of thinking in philosophy. And also when it comes to beauty, greatness and truth.

We can still get on track by using our valuable heritage, wisdom, common sense and our departments of learning, science and art and return to a new starting point in life and to a much more healthy state of our human condition.

If we really want that, then action is necessary. Both on the part of the individual, that is often complacent, as well as on the corporations with their often too-limited corporate goals, and on today's many political rulers, who exercise unlimited power for self-interest.

To get on track, anyone can:

- Embrace and practice the humanistic ideals.
- Participate in an economic system that produces cleaner and distributes more fairly, using new trends in corporate social responsibility and innovative digital techniques.
- Build and support a form of government that pursues the common good.
